File Thirteen Records Number 13: The Sound of Thumbnail. This record is the thirteenth in an ongoing series of musical and literary items brought to you by the fine souls at File Thirteen.

Parallels. I wanted something, you gave me nothing. I guess that's what I get when I put my faith in you. When will I see the shame? When will I feel the pain? It's destructiveness in which I dwell. You can't escape me, I can't get out. It's all the same.

Split Decision. Produce the product and levy the taxes. Motivate the motive, it's a split decision. How can you manage the market in such thickness? How can I reap your advantage with such quickness? Relate relations to the proprietor. Harass harassment until it begins to split. It's so a.m. to p.m. It's a cluster fuck. And when I see the sidewalk, I fall in the cracks.

Shirts and Skins. You couldn't make me shed a single tear in your favor. And then it all comes down to who can let it all out. Dig in deep, beneath my skin. There's nothing left for me to use. And I cannot see the cause. Nothing left for you to abuse.

Burning Bridges. Tried to explain: not a bad deal to turn around and break the seal. I carry the weight for it. I carry the hate from it. I'll give you the key, just take it from me. I picked it up and threw it down. I couldn't bury it right in the ground. It's time to go, try not to run. Throw it away, throw it away. You know it seems to get in the way today. Cutting the string severs the nerve. Time for today, time for today. It's time to pay, it's time to pay today.

Thumbnail, being Justin Sinkovich, Jason Morris, and David Burns, was recorded and mixed on the fourth and eleventh of November, 1993 at Underground Studios by Matt Lincoln. The record was then mastered at K-Disc and pressed at United Record Pressing.
